Leaders in Research & Health Sciences

During Black History Month, we celebrate the many achievements and contributions of Black Canadians and their communities who, throughout history, have done so much to make Canada a culturally diverse, compassionate, and prosperous country.

For this activity, investigate important accomplishments of a Black Canadian in science, research, or heart and brain health. To get you started in your exploration, Dr. Anderson Ruffin Abbott and Dr. Dominique Gaspard were two groundbreaking leaders in the field of health sciences. Include your notes below on what you discover!
